Serving Member of the Industrial Court of Northern Ireland, Geraldine Alexander, has recently been appointed as a non-legal panel member of the Industrial and Fair Employment Tribunals of Northern Ireland.

Industrial Court Chair, Sarah Havlin, said "I am delighted to hear that Geraldine has been appointed to this important role within Employment Law and Relations in Northern Ireland. Geraldine has been an invaluable Member of the Industrial Court since her appointment in April 2023."

Geraldine brings over 35 years of experience as a senior trade union official with the Northern Ireland Public Service Alliance, where she represented members across the civil and public services, including the voluntary and community sectors.

She has extensive and proven experience in industrial relations and collective bargaining, with a strong background in equality, human rights, and health and safety matters.

Geraldine is also a current Board Member of the Labour Relations Agency, further contributing her expertise to employment relations in Northern Ireland.

A former Board Member and Deputy Chairperson of the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland, she also holds a first-class honours degree in Management and Business Studies.
